

What is claimed is:

1. A data collection system, comprising a portable data information collection unit having a liquid crystal display capable of touch sensitive data input, wherein the data collection unit has data input and output ports to provide for data interchange between the unit and a personal computer, and wherein the unit is programmed to emulate a medical history data collection protocol.